Fretting about to-morrow's trouble drives them off.

A Quaker, having I which proved unound, named Bacon, be wrote to it, but received no answer, meeting the seller, he to take back the horse, he positively refused to do remonstrances of no avail calmly said: "Friend, I less heard of the devil eat of swine, and I find that fast in the Bacon. Go there, friend."

"What kind of sauce with your steak," asked diner in a restaurant. "ments were served with it is as tough as yesterday of circular-saws."

When a horse-railroad this situation, the other brother said, "There is fare more now."
